THE (JAMES) PORTER COLLECTION

Biographical History

James Porter (1865-1951) came to Conway in 1881 to serve his articles with Mr William Jones, solicitor. He eventually became a partner in the company, which changed name to William Jones, Porter & Co., then Porter & Amphlett (c. 1899) and finally Porter & Co. c.1922, the name under which the company traded until the late 1990s when it was incorporated into the firm of Gamlins, solicitors with branches throughout North Wales.

During his working life, James Porter served as Clerk to the Colwyn Bay Local Board (1894 –1897), during which time the Board became an Urban District Council; Clerk to the Justices at Conway (1888 -) and Nant Conway division (1914 -); Clerk to the Income Tax Commissioners and to Conway Rural Council (1912 -); Clerk to the Conway and Colwyn Bay Joint Water Board (1919 - 1940). Appointed Under – Sheriff in 1889, he served in that capacity several times afterwards. A member of Conway Borough Council (1900 – 1902), he became Mayor in 1902 and in 1931 was made the third Freeman of Conway. In 1935, twelve months after his retirement from legal practice, he was made a magistrate. James Porter also served as Manager of Conway and Gyffin schools, President of the Chester and North Wales Law Society (1914 – 1915), Honorary Solicitor to the Royal Cambrian Academy

The Porter family came to Colwyn Bay from Manchester in 1866 where James' father John converted the mansion house of the Pwllcrochan Estate into the highly successful Pwllcrochan Hotel (which became part of Rydal School in 1938). James' older brother John Merry Porter (1863 – 1942) was a qualified architect and surveyor, who became a partner in J M Porter and Co., a Colwyn Bay based company of architects, surveyors and estate agents (ref. to the J M Porter Collection, currently held in the Denbighshire Record Office).

Administrative History

The collection, consisting of many 1000s of documents was donated to Gwynedd Archive Service prior to 1961. It was sorted and handlisted by the County Archivist, but subsequently moved to an outstore in Glynllifon Armoury, owing to lack of space in the Caernarfon Record Office. A second donation was made in the 1990s, which was boxed, unsorted and added to the material in the Armoury. Subsequently this material was 'weeded' for duplicates and dross by archivists.

The entire collection was transferred to Conwy Archive Service in 2000. Applications for grant-funding to the Pilgrim Trust and to CyMAL for money to employ a Project Archivist were successful, and a substantial proportion of the earlier donation were catalogued and arranged.

A small quantity of additional material is held by Bangor University Archive.
